SEPTEMBER 17, 2001

Actually, all that glitters isn't gold—it's also mirror, foils, faux gems, glass, rhinestones and sequins. With the group show "All That Glitters," this three-month-old gallery interprets the "aesthetic of sparkle," from decorative objects to fine art, exploring varied influences, approaches and philosophies. Buster Cleveland, Arch Connelly, Thomas Lanigan-Schmidt, Mandad, Sandra Payne, Sally Pleet, Christopher Tanner, John Torreano, May Wilson and Rhonda Zwillinger all tackle camp, kitsch, excess, status, glamour, sacramental ornament, sexual transgression, fashion obsession, decoration, opulence and any other word your thesaurus lists for the sparkly stuff. Wear your sunglasses. Through October 13 (1014 Madison Ave., 879-5858)
